PS6018 Wrecking Ball :30 Foreclosure Prevention

An estimated one million families will face foreclosure this year. Not only do foreclosures have a disastrous financial impact on a family, but they also have harsh consequences for entire communities. Just one or two boarded-up homes can send a residential block into a downward spiral, driving down property values and leading to increased crime, rundown schools, and flagging economic growth.

Studies show that roughly 50% of delinquent borrowers avoid contact with their lender hoping the problem will go away. Further, more than 6 in 10 delinquent homeowners are not aware of services that mortgage lenders can offer a person behind in their mortgage.

This campaign will encourage homeowners at risk of losing their homes to call 888-995-HOPE, where they will find quality counseling and financial advice from a trusted, third-party nonprofit on the opportunities available to avoid foreclosure. Campaign

PS6022 0:00:25 Play Sixty (NFL) :25 Child Obesity Prevention

About 9 million children over the age of 6 are considered overweight in this country. The American obesity epidemic has been passed to our youngest generation. Overweight children are at far greater risk of developing some chronic diseases, including Type 2 diabetes and cardiovascular disease. In addition to putting their health at risk, overweight children are often subjected to exclusion by their peers, which can affect their emotional well-being. Teaching kids the importance of eating well and being physically active at a young age is crucial to reversing the trend of childhood obesity in this country. The campaign focuses on the importance of eating healthy and being physically active through several complementary efforts. Contact www.adcouncil.org for more information. Less than 25% of adolescents eat the daily recommended servings of fruits and vegetables. Few get regular physical activity. While mothers and caregivers are aware of the importance of healthy eating and physical activity habits, they struggle with the best way to implement them for their families. With obesity rates rising among children and adults, it's important to provide information and realistic tips for making and sustaining healthy choices for kids. This campaign motivates moms to encourage proper nutrition and physical activity for their families, emphasizing that a bright future starts with a healthy lifestyle. PS6028 Babies :30 Reducing Gun Violence

Despite progress in the fight against gun crime in America, gun crime rates continue to be among the highest in the industrialized world. In 2005, for example, guns were used in more than two-thirds of the 16,700 homicides and in an estimated 420,000 nonfatal violent crimes in our country.

Furthermore, 31% of all homicide victims were 13 to 24 years old, and these teenage and young adult victims were four times more likely to be murdered with a gun than with all other weapons combined.

In reaction to this trend of violence, a campaign was launched in 2003 with Project Safe Neighborhoods, a nationwide commitment to reduce gun violence in America. The campaign is continually funded through a grant from the U.S. Department of Justice.

This PSA campaign speaks directly to the offender and forces them to think about the consequences- the emotional pain, loneliness, and financial hardship that their families will experience as a result of their crime.

The new TV spots deliver an emotional depiction of the hardships that families face as a result of gun crime. New radio spots feature testimonials from offenders, who are currently in prison, speaking about how their incarceration has affected their families. The PSAs all conclude with the campaign tagline, “Gun Crimes Hit Home.” Contact www.adcouncil.org for more information. PS6033 Indoor Tanning is Out :30 AAD

Indoor tanning before the age of 35 has been associated with a significant increase in the risk of melanoma. Yet on an average day, more than one million Americans use indoor tanning salons. Research shows 70 percent of indoor tanners are female, primarily 16 to 29 years old, an age group that's particularly at risk for developing skin cancer.

To help educate the public, particularly young women, the Academy's 2008-2009 skin cancer public service advertisement (PSA) campaign features print, television and radio advertisements with the theme, "Indoor Tanning is Out." The ads encourage those who are using or considering using tanning salons to think twice about partaking in this risky behavior. PS6036 After The Party:15 Ntl Inst Drug Abuse (Bilingual)

Behaviors associated with drug use are among the main factors in the spread of HIV infection in the United States.

Drugs can change the way the brain works, disrupting the parts of the brain that people use to weigh risks and benefits when making decisions. This can be especially dangerous for young people because the areas of the brain involving judgment, decision-making, and emotional control have not fully matured.

To inform America's youth about the important connection between drug use and HIV infection the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) launched The "Learn the Link" campaign.

The campaign includes the "After the Party" public service ads (PSA) where an HIV-positive teenager recounts the night she went to a party and under the influence of drugs and alcohol engaged in risky sexual behavior that resulted in HIV infection.

PS6038 America's Marines :30 Marines

The U.S. Department of Defense and The Advertising Council joined today to launch a national public service advertising (PSA) campaign designed to encourage Americans to participate in activities that show their support of the troops and to communicate that support to military personnel serving both domestically and overseas. The PSAs, being distributed this week, are an extension of the Department of Defense's "America Supports You" initiative, which launched in November 2004.

According to military sociologists, the support of the American people has had a positive and important impact on troop morale. Despite the strong support from the American people, testimony documents reveal that often military members and their families are not aware of that support. Created by ad agency DeVito/Verdi in New York, the new national multi-media PSA campaign is a dual-targeted effort, which is designed to encourage and inspire more Americans to join in the effort to support the troops and, in turn, communicate that support to the troops.

The PSA campaign includes radio, magazine and newspaper advertising, which directs Americans and the military to visit www.AmericaSupportsYou.mil where they will not only find ideas and examples of how to support the troops, but can also post information about activities in their community that support the troops. Visitors can post messages of thanks to a service member, or download branding materials (posters, bumper stickers, buttons, and other collateral materials) that communicate "America Supports You." In addition, service members can log on to read about ways that the American public supports them. Contact www.adcouncil.org for more information. Sponsor Organizations: U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, National Inventors Hall of Fame Foundation Campaign Site: www.InventNow.org

Through its history, America has been among the most innovative countries in the world. In order to continue this tradition, the Ad Council has partnered with the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and the National Inventors Hall of Fame to create the Inspiring Invention PSA campaign in an effort to inspire a new generation of inventors.

The campaign messaging is designed to encourage children, ages 8-11, to take an interest in inventing and to make creativity a fun and rewarding part of their lives. Using the messaging “Anything’s possible. Keep thinking.” provides kids with the motivating message that if you can imagine it then you can make it a reality.

To renew this important message, the latest PSAs feature even more imaginative and outlandish inventions. Each featured invention shows an “inventor’s” imaginative improvements to everyday objects. The PSAs also direct kids to visit the campaign’s fully interactive Web site Inventnow.org. On the site kids are able to learn more about inventing, play exciting games and share their own inventions.

Everyone Knows Your Name Online Sexual Exploitation PS6049

New York, NY, March 23, 2007 – The Ad Council together with The U.S. Department of Justice and National Center for Missing & Exploited Children® (NCMEC) today announced a new phase of their Online Sexual Exploitation public service advertising (PSA) campaign designed to educate teenage girls about the potential dangers of posting and sharing personal information online.

Popular social networking sites such as MySpace, Facebook, and Sconex make it easier for teens to post and share personal information, pictures and videos, which may make them more vulnerable to online predators. Teenage girls are particularly at risk of online sexual exploitation—a recent study by University of New Hampshire researchers for NCMEC found that of the approximately one in seven youth who received a sexual solicitation or approach over the Internet, 70 percent were girls.

“The Internet is one of the greatest technological advances of our time, but it also makes it alarmingly easy for sexual predators to find and contact children,” stated Attorney General Gonzales. “As Attorney General and as a father, I am committed to protecting our children from pedophiles who troll the Internet for kids. The Think Before You Post campaign sends a strong reminder to children and their parents to be cautious when posting personal information online because anything you post, anyone can see: family, friends and even not-so-friendly people.”

Another study conducted by Cox Communications shows that 61 percent of 13- to 17-year-olds have a personal profile on sites such as MySpace, Friendster, or Xanga. In addition, the study found that half of these have posted pictures of themselves online and that one out of five teens reported that it is safe (i.e. “somewhat” or “very safe”) to share personal information on a public blog or networking site. Thirty-seven percent of 13- to 17-year-olds said they’re “not very concerned” or “not at all concerned” about someone using personal information they’ve posted online in ways they haven’t approved. PS6054 Youth Reckless Driving Act Now :30

Sponsor Organization: The State Attorneys General

Campaign Website: www.URtheSpokesperson.com

Car crashes are the number one killer of teens in the United States. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) data show that, each year, on average:

More than 300,000 teens are injured in car crashes

Nearly 8,000 teens are involved in fatal crashes

More than 3,500 teens are killed

NHTSA research also shows that teen drivers are involved in more than five times as many fatal crashes as adults. Young drivers are more likely to speed, run red lights, make illegal turns, and die in an SUV rollover.

With the message "Speak Up," the UR the Spokesperson campaign targets young adults between the ages of 15 and 21 and encourages them to be the spokesperson against reckless driving by empowering them to speak up when they are in the car with friends and don't feel safe. Sadly each year 26,000 young adults age out of the foster care system without being adopted.

General Market Effort:

The general market campaign launched in July 2004 with the goal of raising awareness of the significant number of children in this country waiting to be adopted. New PSAs have been developed as an extension of the highly successful initial campaign. These new, heartwarming PSAs illustrate that parents do not need to be “perfect” to become a parent to a teen from foster care. The PSAs take a look at some of the ordinary situations that parents experience everyday with their children, thus reinforcing the notion that it is these moments that really count. The public service ads end with the tagline, “You don't have to be perfect to be a perfect parent. There are thousands of teens in foster care who would love to put up with you.”

Spanish-Language Effort:

The Adoption Spanish-language campaign first launched in April 2005 and also aims to raise awareness of the number of children waiting to be adopted. Among waiting children, 15% are Hispanic. New PSAs have been developed for the campaign that highlight special, yet everyday moments that families share together. The PSAs also showcase the benefits and fulfillment that adoption through foster care can bring. The PSAs poignantly end with the tagline “Complete a life, complete your own.”

The PSAs direct audiences to visit www.adoptuskids.org or www.adopte1.org (for information in Spanish) or call 1-888-200-4005 or 1-877-ADOPT1 (to connect with Spanish-speaking staff) for important, accurate information about the foster care system and the adoption process. Campaign Website: www.welcomebackveterans.org

Nearly 20 percent of military service members who have returned from Iraq and Afghanistan — 300,000 in all — report symptoms of post traumatic stress disorder or major depression, yet only slightly more than half have sought treatment. Additionally, Iraq and Afghanistan veterans under the age of 24 have an unemployment rate that is three times the national average.

With these veterans representing less than 1% of the population, transitioning home can be a tough challenge; one that can be increasingly hard because of the distance and stigma they may feel from the general public. The goal of this campaign is to emotionally connect viewers to this new generation of veterans and foster a more supporting environment for returning vets. PS6063 National Alcohol & Drug Addiction Lock & Key :30

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), in partnership with the Ad Council, will launch a national awareness public service advertising (PSA) campaign designed to decrease the negative attitudes that surround mental illness and encourage young adults to support their friends who are living with mental health problems. In addition to the campaign launch, the results of a new HealthStyles survey, licensed by Porter Novelli to SAMHSA and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will be announced at the event.

According to SAMHSA, in 2005 there were an estimated 24.6 million adults aged 18 or older who experienced serious psychological distress (SPD), which is highly correlated with serious mental illness. Among 18 to 25 year olds, the prevalence of SPD is high (18.6 % for 18-25, vs. 11.3% for all adults 18+), yet this age group shows the lowest rate of help-seeking behaviors. Additionally, those with mental health conditions in this segment have a high potential to minimize future disability if social acceptance is broadened and they receive the right support and services early on.

Created pro bono by Grey Worldwide, the new PSA campaign aims to reach 18 to 25 year old adults who have friends living with mental illnesses and highlights the importance of their providing support. The U.S. Department of Health & Human Services is the agency sponsoring this psa.

PS6071 0:00:20 Mike Prevention Drug-Free America

The Partnership for a Drug-Free America® and the Alliance for Consumer Education (ACE) released a new public service announcement (PSA) today on the potential deadly consequences of "huffing," the intentional inhalation of a substance to get high.

The PSA titled "Mike," was released during a press conference sponsored by the National Inhalant Prevention Coalition (NIPC) and Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), to kick off National Inhalants and Poisons Awareness Week March 18-24.

Shot in the style of today's trendy self-made videos, the 30-second TV spot, produced as part of an inhalant abuse awareness campaign by the Partnership and ACE, focuses on young teen boys, 14 or 15, who are in a park. Without actually showing them commit the act, viewers are given the impression that the boys are sniffing something then joking about it...until one boy falls to the ground. The boy's friend laughs, until he suddenly realizes that something is drastically wrong. Then the mood turns to fear, when he realizes his friend is not conscious.

"The PSA, directed at parents, is admittedly grim," said Steve Pasierb, president and CEO of the Partnership. "Sadly, it mirrors the stories that we hear about frequently from communities across the country where more and more teens are "huffing" and dying or getting seriously hurt. There is typically much anguish among parents because they simply were not aware that their child was engaging in this dangerous behavior."

Sniffing concentrated amounts of vapors to get high can directly induce heart failure and death within minutes of repeated inhalations. "Sudden sniffing death" is usually associated with the abuse of butane, propane, gasoline, and gases and vapors found in any number of common household products.

A teen boy helps his grandmother open a prescription bottle. She takes one pill, and turns away to take it. He then sneaks several pills into his pocket. Today, the Partnership joined with the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy to announce a major new initiative of the National Youth Anti-Drug Media Campaign—a national public awareness campaign alerting parents to the dangers of prescription drug abuse. New advertising for television will debut during this year's Super Bowl on February 3rd, marking the start of this first federally-funded effort to educate parents on the troubling trend of teens abusing prescription medication. In addition to two new television spots, the campaign includes print and online advertising and community outreach. Pro bono creative for the campaign was provided by Drafftcb New York.

While overall teen drug use is in steady decline nationwide, an alarmingly high number of teens are abusing medicines to get high. Recent studies by the Partnership, the University of Michigan's Monitoring the Future Study and others, indicate that more teens abuse prescription drugs than any other illicit drug, except marijuana— more than cocaine, heroin, and methamphetamine combined. In the Partnership's annual tracking study, 1 in 5 teens reported abusing a prescription pain medication, and 1 in 10 report abuse of a prescription stimulant. Agency: Lumina Films

Sponsor Organization: United States Olympic Committee
In 2007, the federal government seized 56 underground steroid labs in the U.S., resulting in the confiscation of 11.4 million doses. The use of performance-enhancing substances is of primary concern in American sport. No segment of sport – from professional to youth – is immune to this problem. With increasing media coverage on steroid use in sports, teen usage has become a matter of greater consequence.

Not only are steroids a potential health hazard, they raise many ethical implications. In order to prevent teens from using steroids without increasing consideration, this campaign is designed to make steroids socially unacceptable. The PSAs will drive traffic to DontBeAnAsterisk.com to learn more about steroids, hear from professional athletes, and find healthy alternatives to excel in athletics. Don't be an asterisk!

PS6089 0:00:30 Helping Out :30 Ocean Awareness

Campaign Sponsors: National Marine Sanctuary Foundation, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration & U.S. Department of the Interior

Our oceans are in trouble. Careless activities by people, at sea and on land, have created the dire state of the oceans today:

Routine activities on land and water contribute billions of pounds of debris entering the ocean every year

In the US, littering accounts for the majority marine debris that originates from land. Plastic debris is especially dangerous, because it does not degrade and poses swallowing and entanglement threats to marine life.

Oceans do not have an infinite capacity to absorb all the waste we allow to flow into it. Not only are we hurting marine life, but because human life is so dependent on a healthy ocean, we are hurting ourselves.

This phase of the campaign launched in summer of 2008 and features characters from Disney's The Little Mermaid.

The spots raise awareness of the problem in the ocean and let audiences know that they can help the ocean by recycling and disposing of trash properly. The PSAs invite viewers to visit www.KeepOceansClean.org to find out more about the ocean and what everyone can do to help.

PS6090 0:00:30 Fish :30 Childhood Asthma

Sponsor Organization: U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Childhood asthma in the United States has reached epidemic proportions. Since 1980, the number of people diagnosed with asthma has more than doubled-and the number continues to increase each year. This disease affects 1 out of 13 kids under 15, or 5.5 million.

Asthma is one of the leading causes of school absenteeism -responsible for about 10 million missed days, roughly 2 million emergency room visits, and approximately 5,000 deaths. And these statistics only account for known cases of asthma-many cases remain undiagnosed.

Although there is no known cure for this disease, experts agree that there are a variety of ways to reduce the number of asthma attacks. The latest PSAs highlight some unexpected items that can trigger asthma attacks and simple ways to take care of these items so that they are safer for a child with asthma.

PS6091 0:00:30 Oz :30 Lifelong Literacy

When young people become good readers in the early grades, they are more likely to become better learners throughout their school years and beyond. While parental involvement is critical, it ultimately comes down to inspiring the individual not only to read books, but to also find their own passion about reading in all forms.

This campaign was created with the Library of Congress in an effort to inspire young readers to become lifelong learners. The objective is to inspire fun and promote literacy in all types of learning. From books to magazines to comics and all other forms, reading really gives kids the opportunity to explore their imaginations.

The PSAs invite kids to "Explore New Worlds. Read." Viewers are also encouraged to visit www.Literacy.gov, and explore the Library of Congress site including The Storybook Adventure activity created for this campaign.

Approximately 7,000 high school students drop out every school day, which translates to one in three students. Once students make the decision to drop out, they lack the tools to compete in today's society and diminish their chances for greater success in the future. But the decision to drop out of school does not happen overnight; it comes after years of frustration and failure. Often, those that drop out have run out of motivation and have no source of support or encouragement in school or at home.

The Boost campaign follows the stories of 10 at-risk seniors from across the country that are struggling to finish high school. Directing audiences to visit a redesigned BoostUp.org, the campaign has created a virtual community of support for any teen struggling to make it to graduation. Utilizing mobile messaging in addition to the most popular social networking sites - MySpace, YouTube and Facebook - visitors to the Boost Website have multiple opportunities to give a virtual "boost" to the profiled teens, and the teens in their own lives.

BoostUp.org serves as a hub, facilitating conversations and aggregating support, in addition to serving as a resource to parents and teens. All of these elements are designed to work together to encourage peer discussion about the importance of graduating from high school.

PS6099 0:00:30 Mothers Rev. :30 Reducing Gun Violence

Despite progress in the fight against gun crime in America, gun crime rates continue to be among the highest in the industrialized world. In 2005, for example, guns were used in more than two-thirds of the 16,700 homicides and in an estimated 420,000 nonfatal violent crimes in our country. Furthermore, 31% of all homicide victims were 13 to 24 years old, and these teenage and young adult victims were four times more likely to be murdered with a gun than with all other weapons combined. In reaction to this trend of violence, a campaign was launched in 2003 with Project Safe Neighborhoods, a nationwide commitment to reduce gun violence in America. The campaign is continually funded through a grant from the U.S. Department of Justice. This PSA campaign speaks directly to the offender and forces them to think about the consequences- the emotional pain, loneliness, and financial hardship that their families will experience as a result of their crime. PS6101 0:01:00 A Polio Free Wrld 1:00 (Rotary Intl)

After 20 years of hard work, Rotary and its partners are eradicating this tenacious disease. Four key strategies for stopping poliovirus transmission:

Routine immunization

High infant-immunization coverage with four doses of oral polio vaccine (OPV) in the first year of life is critical. Routine immunization is essential because it's the primary way that polio-free countries protect their children from the threat of imported polio.

National Immunization Days

For decades, Rotary's PolioPlus program has been one of the driving forces during National Immunization Days, or NIDs. Rotarians are involved in myriad ways before, during, and after an NID, by providing funds for millions of drops of vaccine, promoting upcoming campaigns in the community, distributing vaccine to local health centers, serving as monitors, working with local officials to reach every child, and participating in surveillance efforts.

Surveillance

Rotarians play an important role in working with health workers, pediatricians, and others to find, report, and investigate cases of acute flaccid paralysis in timely manner (ideally within 48 hours of onset). PolioPlus sometimes helps fund containers that preserve the integrity of stool samples during transport to laboratories. The program has also played a leading role in providing equipment for the global poliovirus laboratory.

Targeted mop-up campaigns

Rotary's support of mop-up campaigns is similar to NID volunteering, but on a smaller, often "house-to-house," scale.

PS6106 0:01:00 Catch/Candles 1:00 (Curing PID)

Each year approximately 1 million women in the United States experience an episode of symptomatic pelvic inflammatory disease (PID) (*) (1,2). Women with PID are at increased risk of chronic pelvic pain, ectopic pregnancy, and tubal infertility (3,4).

After one episode of PID, a woman's risk of ectopic pregnancy increases sevenfold compared with the risk for women who have no history of PID. Approximately 12% of women are infertile after a single episode of PID, almost 25% after two episodes, and over 50% after three or more episodes (5). Other sequelae associated with PID include dyspareunia, pyosalpinx, tubo- ovarian abscess, and pelvic adhesions (6).

Overall, such complications are estimated to occur among 15%-20% of women with PID, and they often require subsequent surgical intervention. These medical consequences of PID are associated with great emotional stress and can have a major effect on a woman's reproductive health.

PS6109 0:01:00 Tough 1:00 (College Access)

Research shows that regardless of income level, America's young people want to go to college and recognize that postsecondary education is a key to their future.

However, despite these high aspirations, low-income and first-generation students are underrepresented on college campuses. The reasons vary, but key barriers include affordability, a lack of college-going knowledge and preparation, expectations, as well as guidance and encouragement.

This campaign encourages more low-income students and their families to take the necessary steps toward postsecondary education, with effective support from parents and adult influencers (teachers, counselors, coaches).

To learn more about the actual steps they need to take to be prepared for, and ultimately apply to, college, audiences are directed to the campaign website www.KnowHow2GO.org or to call 800-433-3243 for a free brochure.

PS6110 0:00:30 Restaurant Rv :30 (Diabetes Mng)

There are nearly 21 million Americans with diabetes and the population is growing very rapidly. More than 600 people die from diabetes and its complications every day. Diabetes can cause serious complications such as heart attack, stroke, blindness, nerve damage, and kidney failure.

The American Diabetes Association recommends that most patients with diabetes strive for an A1C level of less than 7%, yet almost half of adults with diabetes have an A1C of 7% or higher. Studies have shown that many patients don't know what the A1C is, don't have an A1C test done on a regular basis, and don't know their A1C level even if they have the test performed.

In an effort to raise awareness of the risks of uncontrolled diabetes and help patients take the first step toward staying healthy, the Ad Council has partnered with the American Diabetes Association (ADA) and the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation International (JDRF) to make diabetes patients more aware of their true risk for certain diabetes-related complications. The campaign provides type 1 and type 2 adult patients with diabetes information on how managing their A1C level can reduce health risks.

"Safety belts are not designed to fit smaller children," said NHTSA Administrator Jeffrey W. Runge, M.D. "Booster seats remedy that problem by positioning the belt where it is most effective."

In fact, young children prematurely moved to safety belts are 4 times more likely to suffer serious head injuries than children in child safety seats or booster seats. However, without consistent laws and enforcement, the importance of using a booster seat is still largely unknown among parents and caregivers. While most parents have heard of booster seats, surveys have found that they don't know how booster seats work, how their children can benefit or who should use them.

In a response to this major information gap, NHTSA and the Ad Council have partnered to launch the new campaign to communicate the importance of using booster seats. Leo Burnett, the ad agency that introduced the Crash Test Dummies nearly two decades ago, once again donated their time and talent to create the PSAs for the campaign which features new child-sized Crash Test Dummies. PS6360 0:00:30 Jeff Peckler :30 Drunk Driving Prevent Drunk or impaired driving kills nearly 18,000 people a year. That's one person every 32 minutes. That makes it everyone's problem. It seems that many people were doing their part to put a stop to this completely preventable epidemic. Alcohol-related traffic fatalities reached a low point in the late 1990s. Research also indicates that 62% of Americans exposed to the now-iconic Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk campaign have personally intervened to stop someone from driving drunk, no doubt saving countless lives. However, since the late 90's, alcohol-related driving deaths have been steadily increasing. It seems that though the campaign was very successful, it did not change the behavior of many potential impaired drivers. Many thought the messages to be targeted at overtly drunk drivers, and not them. When decision time came, they would consider themselves merely "buzzed" and get behind the wheel.
